

CODE RED

WHERE YOU LIVE AFFECTS YOUR HEALTH

ONE YEAR LATER

Wednesday, June 1

7pm to 9pm

The Hamilton Spectator
Auditorium, 44 Frid St.

The groundbreaking Code Red series, by investigative reporter Steve Buist, was published in 2010. Code Red used data to map the health of Hamilton down to the neighbourhood level. Code Red started a new conversation in Hamilton. Learn what has and hasn't happened in the year since publication.

GUEST SPEAKERS:

From Code Red Kid to University Professor Dr. Michael Hayes grew up in a Hamilton neighbourhood highlighted in Code Red. He has spent the past 20 years of his career studying how neighbourhood social and economic conditions affect people's health. He brings his unique perspective and will reflect on his own experiences, the findings of Code Red and his own work to suggest ways forward for the city in reducing health disparities between neighbourhoods. Introduced by Dr. Jim Dunn, McMaster University

SPEAKERS INCLUDE:

STEVE BUIST, Spectator investigative reporter, a three-time National Newspaper Award winner and three-time Ontario Journalist of the Year.

NEIL JOHNSTON, a health mapping expert and a collaborator on the Code Red project.

TERRY COOKE, former chairman of Hamilton-Wentworth region and now president and CEO of the Hamilton Community Foundation.

DR. CHRIS MACKIE, Hamilton's associate medical officer of health.

MARK CHAMBERLAIN, president and CEO of Trivaris, past President of the Hamilton Roundtable for Poverty Reduction and a community advocate.

HOST:

JIM POLING, Managing Editor, The Hamilton Spectator
